RE: UPDATE - 2026 IRRIGATION SEASON

Greetings!

This is an update to the city's memorandum (memo) RE: 2026 Irrigation Season dated 20 Apr 2026. Please see the 20 Apr memo for detail and background information.

Because Boise Project Board of Control (the source of the city municipal irrigation system's water) is in operations for flood release management, river water discharged into the Boise Project system for flood control (river flow) has been made available for irrigation.

The city intends to put irrigation water into the gravity irrigation system serving the majority of the city on normal Monday through Thursday irrigation schedule (turned into the system at approximately 8:00a Monday morning and turned off at approximately 8:00a Friday morning) starting the week of Mon 27 April 2026.

The city's intent is to continue to make 'river flow' water available into the gravity irrigation system on normal schedule as long as Boise Project is in flood release management mode. The city does not know how long this will last.

Boise Project has indicated that irrigation water availability will be re-evaluated and set after flood management operations have ceased. After Boise Project has re-evaluated their delivery, the city will be able to re-evaluate the city's water delivery for the remainder of this irrigation season.

Please see the city's memo RE: 2026 Irrigation Season dated 20 Apr 2026 for detail on the city's current drought delivery plan.

Additional detail may also be available at Boise Project Board of Control's website (<https://boiseproject.net/public>) as Boise Project updates their public announcements.
